

Central Consulting Group and RAVENFLOW announce Partnership

MINNEAPOLIS, MN: Central Consulting Group, a Deltek Premier Partner and Ravenflow, the leader in visual requirements and business process definition, today announced that CCG will be representing RAVEN software and services as part of its solutions offerings.

“The powerful combination of Ravenflow’s RAVEN software and Deltek Vision offers the opportunity to accelerate solutions development for our clients,” said Central Consulting Group Partner Jim Falkanger. “A successful integration of business solutions, however, demands a thorough understanding of the project processes affected, an in-depth knowledge of the technologies involved, and a careful attention to the details of how they all interact. CCG looks forward to applying Ravenflow’s visual business process definition software to enable customers to achieve this goal.”

“RAVEN has revolutionized how we adapt software to address our clients’ business processes. RAVEN’s ability to visualize processes in real time provides clients immediate understanding of a proposed new process. We are able to articulate and adapt their processes to the new environment in ways we never could before,” said Pamela Ingram, Group Lead, Central Consulting Group Strategic Services.

“We are very pleased that CCG has selected RAVEN to further optimize their Deltek Vision environment,” said Susan Boers, President and CEO of Ravenflow. “We look forward to working closely with them to help accelerate their solution delivery in the architectural and engineering markets.”

Based upon patented language processing technology, Ravenflow’s RAVEN allows business people to describe their needs in plain English, then automatically identifies missing requirements while generating visual process and use case diagrams that all stakeholders can understand. With its distinctive business orientation and process-based approach to requirements definition, RAVEN is uniquely suited for use on both enterprise process improvement and application development projects.

About Ravenflow is the leading provider of visual requirements definition software that allows companies to gain better insight, clarity, and quality in their process improvement and application development projects. Leveraging a uniquely business-driven and process-based approach, Ravenflow transforms requirements definition by empowering business analysts to rapidly produce clear specifications of their business process workflows, business use cases, and business application needs. Ravenflow recently was named the fastest growing company in the Requirements market, received the 2009 Jolt Productivity Award and the 2009 IBM Rational Partner of the Year Award, and was selected as a Gartner “Cool Vendor in Application Development.”
